Latest from the Crater.

We are indebted to the Hon. S. G. Wilder for the following letter which furnishes the latest statement of the condition of the crater:

VOLUNO HOUSE, June 28, 1886. EDITOR GARRITE:- I have visited the crater two or three times since I wrote last week. For the past few days the fires have been steadily increasing in volume and brightness, and now visitors can go to the "tunnel" on the edge of the pits, and from there over the old trail, where it has sunk between the east and west pits, (which are on the former sites of the "New Lake" and "Halemanman" respectively look disable by a long. man," respectively,) look directly into a long rather narrow chasm, in which the liquid lava is boiling furiously and presenting a grand sight. The interior of Halemauman is quiet, but its rugged banks on the east, north and west are filled with with vents from which great volumes of sulphur-ous fumes and steam are poured out. The effect at night, of the fires reflected on these massing of snowy and bluish vapors, is very fine, and will re-pay a visit, aside from the great center of attract-ton, the appearance of the boiling lava in the east chasm

Today, after visiting the north side of the west pit I went around the east pit to the southeast bank, and had a fine view of the south side of Ha-

On the way around I passed two mounds, from which sulphur fumes were issning, and I procured some beautiful crystals. There is also a quantity of tufa-like lava to be procured there, some of which is quite pasty and not when first collected. On the way back to the Volcano House I found that a line of "hot cracks" were open from the pit running in a north easterly direction to near the crater wall opposite Kilanea-iki. The whole crater is full of interest, and a visit to it something to be remembered. The trip from the house to the pits, and a thorough examination of them, takes a little less than four bours, and the road all the way is most excellent. The weather is very fine and Mauna Lot and Mauna Kea both presenta, grand appearance.
